The March is on. January 11th.

"My Oh My!" Scott Miller, former announcer for the NDSU Bison football team, always said this as the Bison created a legacy with great moments. And this Saturday is one of those "My Oh My" moments. For the eighth time this decade North Dakota State University will be heading back to the FCS championship game. See you all in Frisco! North Dakota State University will be back January 11th competing for another championship against James Madison.

This NDSU football team seems to be unstoppable this season, with a fifteen to zero win loss record this year. We will find out Saturday if the team can keep this winning streak of the season and winning streak of National Championships.
